It's Awards season at YCP!

• On March 23, 2012, NY1 named Executive Director Stephen Grimaldi as “Nite of the Week” for his leadership efforts to bring healthy food to hungry New Yorkers.

• One of five organizations accepted out of fifty-seven non-profits and schools that applied, YCP will participate in the New York Cares Volunteer Impact Program (VIP). As part of VIP, New York City’s largest volunteer organization has given YCP a three year grant which will help improve upon and expand our volunteer opportunities and recruitment.

• YCP received the prestigious Hero Award from the FEED Foundation during their 4th Annual FEED-Raiser and Market event in December 2011. According to FEED Foundation co-founder Lauren Bush Lauren, “YCP is a stand-out example of the FEED Foundation’s mission to fight hunger worldwide.”

Earlier this year, YCP adopted innovative procedures to launch a “Choice” model for its Pantry operations. The new model encourages Pantry members to choose the food they would like to receive instead of receiving pre-packed grocery bags. Choice Pantry is designed to meet the needs of our families by providing them the culturally appropriate, nutritionally balanced food they select every other week. At YCP, Pantry members use touch-screen wireless tablets that record their food selection and transmit it to our volunteers to receive and pack. In conjunction with the launch of Choice Pantry, YCP is also introducing YCP Direct, a unique online ordering system found on our website. The alternative to on-site ordering permits members to submit a pre-order by accessing the YCP Direct menu remotely. YCP Direct streamlines food selection by allowing Pantry members to order from home, a community center, or a public library via our website menu. Pantry members can then pick up their order at a mutually convenient time without having to wait in line. YCP’s Choice Pantry and YCP Direct encourage Pantry members to check their cupboards and refrigerators before ordering to ensure they receive the food they know they will be able to use. YCP’s new initiatives help our families stretch their food dollars, eliminate food waste, and ensure the dignity of our Pantry members. YCP received generous support from the New York State Department of Health “Hunger Prevention and Nutrition Assistance Program” and The Hyde & Watson Foundation to build the website menu and purchase the touch-screen wireless tablets.

Recently, we spoke with Pantry member Ollie Reeves, who was thrilled to find out that her diabetes-restricted diet would now be taken into account at YCP. Her ability to choose healthy, nutritious choices based upon her needs. foods will allow Ollie to stop wasting unwanted food and instead make events leading to less dependence on YCP’s food provision. diet would now be taken into account at YCP. Faced with hardship, Karen turns to YCP’s Pantry

Karen lives in Harlem with her husband and teenage son and, as long as she can remember she has been the wage earner for the household. To improve her family’s economic situation, Karen decided to enroll in nursing school, making her husband’s monthly disability check the only form of income. As her financial burden grew, her son informed her that he had decided to forgo his education to enroll in nursing school, making her husband’s monthly disability check the only form of income.

YCP’s Nutrition Initiative for Children and Families Program Scores Big

Since 2009, Yorkville Common Pantry has been encouraging healthy eating and nutrition education through its popular Nutrition Initiative for Children and Families (NICF) program. Last year, the 10-class curriculum of interactive nutrition education classes taught 317 youth and their families about healthy food choices and provided hands-on opportunities to practice preparing healthy meals using fresh ingredients, fruits, and vegetables. Last year, YCP embarked upon a year-long evaluation to assess the impact of the NICF course. The research evaluator, generously funded by The Heckscher Foundation for Children, reported that NICF is positively impacting the lives of our participants. The evaluation aimed to measure noticeable change in participants’ eating behaviors. As a result of the comprehensive lessons taught in NICF, students have instituted statistically significant positive changes in their eating behaviors. During pre-test evaluation, 79% of program participants reported eating fast food at least once a week. After partaking in YCP’s nutrition education class, that number dropped to only 19%, as reported in post-test evaluation. The NICF program provides our Pantry members and their families with substantial and valuable increases in their knowledge of healthy food and behaviors.

With an average of 3,600 volunteered hours each month, we thank our volunteers for their incredible part in our transition to a Choice Pantry, our facilitation of YCP Direct, and the many creative conversations that have improved our services.

Our collaborations with volunteers from groups such as Goldman Sachs, WhyHunger, Hampton Inn, Macy’s, New York Cares, and FEED’s Lauren Bush Lauren have helped pantry members make healthy choices, provided nutrition education to children, supplied fresh fruits and vegetables to low-income families, and prepared nutritious and delicious breakfasts and dinners.

We want to also thank, New York City schools and religious organizations for a fantastic Food Drive season! We distributed donated toys to hundreds of families during the Larry Morales Toy Drive and collected over 10,000 cans of soup during the Souper Bowl.
